Many years ago, in 1883, the H. H. Brown Shoe Company started making workboots in a little New England country town. In those days shoes were made by hand craftsmen who spent many years of apprenticeship to learn their skills.

Concentrating on better grade shoes, this tiny company grew, so that by 1963 it had become one of America's leading bootmakers, with factories in the U.S.A. and Canada. The production was geared to private label and make up customers.

In January 1963 it was decided to extend H. H. Brown's fine quality work boots to independent merchants thru a branded instock division. Thus, the CAROLINA brand was born. A new plant was put into operation equipped with the most modern shoe machinery available. The long tradition of fine craftsmanship was brought to Morganton, N. C., from New England, and as in earlier days, the new Carolina division's objective is to make a superior product.

We are proud to present the 1974 line of quality service shoes, workboots and sport boots.
